

For another assignment I did in my previous major of Graphic Design in one of my required courses, that would be the final project in my SA-1800-1 Drawing course. For what the final project was about, that would be scaling up one of the three drawings that was done from the previous assignment from three different natural objects of choice such as leaves, flowers, and even pinecones as well that were drawn out in three different sections on a piece of paper that was divided up into four different sections using charcoal, waterproof drawing ink, and also white conte crayon as well.

For how I did this assignment, that would be that the three different natural objects I ended up drawing from the previous assignment were an acorn and two leaves using mostly charcoal and waterproof drawing ink and the one that I decided to scale up was one of the leaves and the way I did that was by enlarging that same drawing on a much larger piece of drawing paper by drawing everything out the same way with also trying to add some more detail as well to it with using the same supplies, methods, and techniques from the previous assignment along with also using some new ones as well with then presenting it to the class after I was done through a critique.

When it comes to what I ended up learning from this assignment, that would be how to draw certain kinds of objects in that of an overall step-by-step process through specific supplies, techniques, and methods.